

Bio

Prof Sylvain Boko, previously of Wake Forest University (USA), holds a PhD in International Economics and Development Economics. His expertise spans many areas including, International Trade and Finance, Development Planning and Statistics, Decentralization and, Institutional Reform. He is the author of several publications, including, “Trade, Institutions, Income, and Human Development in Africa” (with Mina Balamoune) in Journal of African Economies, March 2013; Back On Track: Sector-Led Growth in Africa and Implications for Development (with Diery Seck), Africa World Press, 2009; NEPAD and the Future of Economic Policy in Africa (with Diery Seck), Africa World Press, 2008; Decentralization and Reform in Africa (Springer, 2002). A former Fulbright Scholar and NSF grantee, Prof. Boko served, in 2010-2013, as the RTI Chief of Party and Country Representative in Mali, where his work included providing technical assistance and advice to Government Ministries (Education; Finance; Decentralization and Local Governments); designing and coordinating training and capacity building programs in Financial Decentralization management, for senior Government officials. He currently serves as Principal Regional Advisor, and Head of Development Planning and Statistics, in the Capacity Development Division of UNECA, as well as the focal point for ECA advisory services and technical assistance programs provided to member States.

Photo

